Ambition Talk No. 4

Action is the most important factor in success. We fail not because we cannot see but because we don't act. Twenty men know what to do to one who does it. Every city and town has its soap-box inhabitants who can tell you how and why the leading citizens got what they got—plunged-cut specialists who prophesied every successful business move before it was made.

They knew just what to do in every instance; but the other fellow did it. The trouble with such wise crows was not that they could not see, but that they did not act. Mental knowledge never evolves into power until it culminates in action. A man might know everything in the world—history, philosophy, psychology, transcendental therapeutics and bridge whist—and yet starve to death.

He might be the greatest scholar that ever opened a book, but if he were not willing or able to crystallize some little fraction of his knowledge into power the only person who would ever know he was alive would be the census enumerator.

Knowledge never counts, unless coupled with action. Action always counts, whether backed by knowledge or inspired by insanity.

Hunan service, the only thing that gives a man the right to live, be he miner or scholar, laborer or millionaire, can only be performed by men who unite knowledge with action—who supplement the know-how by the do-how. The only people who count are those who learn how to do a thing right and then do it.
